

Tuesday 2nd June— English

Fronted adverbials go at the beginning of a sentence to tell us how, where or when the sentence happened. They are separated from the main part of the sentence with a comma.

For example:

Slowly and steadily, Mr Bear climbed out of bed. (how)

In the middle of the garden, Mr Bear tried to sleep. (where)

Early in the morning, Mr Bear crept back inside. (when)

1. Separate these fronted adverbials into three different lists: how, where, when.

With great care,	Before lunchtime,	As slowly as a snail,	In the car,
In the middle of the night,	Laying on the carpet,	Back inside the house,	After a short while,

2. Re-write these sentences with different fronted adverbials so that they make sense with the story.

- At lunchtime, all the bears went to bed.
- In the middle of the forest, Mr Bear tried to sleep.
- In the car, Mrs Bear slept peacefully.
- Energetically, Mr Bear plodded outside.
- As quick as a flash, Mr Bear fell asleep.

3. Add your own fronted adverbials to these sentences. Don't forget the comma!

★ Also add extra adjectives, adverbs or clauses to these sentences.

- Baby bear played with his planes.
- The fridge hummed.
- The birds tweeted.
- Mrs Bear slept.
- The tapped dripped.

★ Challenge. Here is a simple sentence: Mr Bear tried to sleep.

Re-write it with as many different fronted adverbials as you can.

Try to include these types of fronted adverbials in your sentences:

how /where /when /start with an 'ing' verb /start with a simile /start with a conjunction
